

---

Art Deco Paris 1900—1925: Catalogue of the Exhibition of Pochoir Color Prints from the Graphic Arts Collection

Author(s): Dale Roylance

Source: The Princeton University Library Chronicle, Autumn 1999, Vol. 61, No. 1 (Autumn 1999), pp. 1-72

Published by: Princeton University Library

Stable URL: <http://www.jstor.com/stable/10.25290/prinunivlibrchro.61.1.0001>

---

JSTOR is a not-for-profit service that helps scholars, researchers, and students discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content in a trusted digital archive. We use information technology and tools to increase productivity and facilitate new forms of scholarship. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Your use of the JSTOR archive indicates your acceptance of the Terms & Conditions of Use, available at <https://about.jstor.org/terms> is collaborating with JSTOR to digitize, preserve and extend access to The Princeton University Library Chronicle

JSTOR

ART DECO PARIS

1900–1925

POCHOIR COLOR PRINTS
FROM THE GRAPHIC ARTS COLLECTION
LEONARD L. MILBERG GALLERY OF GRAPHIC ARTS
PRINCETON UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Dale Roylance, curator
October 15, 2000–April 1, 2001

Acknowledgments

The checklist on pages 54–72 is based on extensive preliminary work by Carl Little for a private catalogue of the Fry Collection done in the late 1980s. The entries for that checklist have been checked, recompiled, and edited by Nora Lin for the current exhibition catalogue. Special recognition must be given to Nora for her invaluable help in all phases of this exhibit and its catalogue. Thanks must also be expressed to Ben Primer, acting head of Rare Books and Special Collections, for his support of the project; to John Bidwell for his excellent introduction; to Judith Martin Waterman for design; and to Joseph Crilley and the Parker Communications Group for their fine color printing. And, as ever, I thank Aggie Sherman, my longtime assistant in the Graphic Arts Collection of the Library, for her steady help and cheery support.

Small squares (■) preceding entries in the checklist indicate items that are illustrated in the exhibition catalogue.

—Dale Roylance

Illustrations

|                                                                                                           |    |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Fernand Cousters, “Une pointe des jalousie,” pochoir platefrom L’homme élégant , (Paris, 1921) | 1  |
| Jost Amman, woodcut of the stencil colorer                                                                | 10 |
| Infanterie russe , woodcut with pochoir coloring                                                   | 11 |
| Katagami stencil patterns                                                                          | 12 |
| Katagami fabric sample                                                                             | 13 |
| Maurice Dufrène, pochoir plate                                                                            | 14 |
| Eugène Grasset, pochoir plates                                                                            | 15 |
| Charles Martin, “Le choix difficile,” pochoir plate                                                       | 16 |
| Boccaccio, De Claris Mulieribus                                                                    | 17 |
| Paul Iribe in Les robes de Paul Poiret , pochoir plate                                             | 18 |
| Georges Lepape, Les choses de Paul Poiret , pochoir plate                                          | 19 |
| George Barbier, dust jacket for La guirlande des mois                                              | 20 |
| André Marty, “Le ciné,” pochoir plate                                                                     | 21 |
| Léon Bakst, pochoir plate from “Peri” costume                                                             | 22 |
| Georges Lepape, “Lady in a Turban,” pochoir plate                                                         | 23 |
| George Barbier, “L’Europe” and “L’Asie,” pochoir plates                                                   | 24 |
| George Barbier, “Chez la marchande des pavots,”pochoir plate                                          | 25 |
| George Barbier, “Le gout des lacques” (The Taste for Lacquer),pochoir plate                           | 26 |
| Janine Aghion, pochoir plate                                                                              | 27 |
| George Barbier, “La folie du jour,” pochoir plate                                                         | 28 |

|                                                                                              |    |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| George Barbier, “La danse,” pochoir plate                                                    | 29 |
| André Marty, “Le bal des sauvages,” pochoir plate                                            | 30 |
| Paul Colin, pochoir plate                                                                    | 31 |
| Charles Martin, “La musique . . .,” pochoir print                                            | 32 |
| Pierre Brissaud, “Quatre a sept . . .,” pochoir plate                                        | 33 |
| Charles Martin, “Costume parisien,” pochoir plate                                            | 34 |
| George Barbier, “Laissez-moi-seule!” pochoir plate                                           | 35 |
| André Marty, “La séance de portrait,” pochoir plate                                          | 36 |
| Paul Poiret, pochoir plate                                                                   | 36 |
| Bernard Boutet de Monvel, “La cape noire,” pochoir plate                                     | 37 |
| Louie Benigni, pochoir plate from Été , 1929                                          | 38 |
| SEM, pochoir plate                                                                           | 39 |
| Edy Legrand, pochoir plate                                                                   | 40 |
| Edouard Benedictus, detail from pochoir plate                                                | 41 |
| Gino Severini, pochoir plate                                                                 | 42 |
| Marie Laurencin, pochoir plate                                                               | 43 |
| Sonia Delaunay, pochoir plate                                                                | 43 |
| Fernand Léger, pochoir invitation                                                            | 44 |
| Pablo Picasso, pochoir plate                                                                 | 45 |
| Henri Matisse, pochoir plate                                                                 | 46 |
| Henri Matisse, Jazz , pochoir plate                                                   | 47 |
| Three designs for Éventails de Paquin by George Barbier and Paul Iribé, pochoir plate | 48 |
| Diamond and emerald jewelry designed by Vever and                                            | 49 |

|                                                                                          |    |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Morgan, pochoir plate                                                                    |    |
| L'exposition internationale des arts décoratifs et industriels modernesposter | 50 |
| Jean Saudé, Traité d'enluminure d'art au pochoir                                  | 51 |
| Norman Ives, serigraph print                                                             | 52 |
| André Lansky, detail from pochoir plate                                                  | 53 |

Introduction to Pochoir

In 1997 the Princeton University Library acquired the pochoir collection of the late Charles Rahn Fry, Class of 1965. I was Curator of Graphic Arts at that time, but the person who really knew the collection was Dale Roylance, my predecessor in that position. As far back as 1982 Dale selected some of Chuck Fry's most spectacular holdings for a small exhibition accompanied by an elegant checklist, The Stencil Art of Pochoir. But in that pre-digital era, it was prohibitively expensive to print in color. This checklist documents a much larger exhibition with many more illustrations displaying a resplendent variety of pochoir techniques in vivid color, which, however, still cannot express the sensuous textures and iridescent sheen of the originals.

Pochoir began as a simple stencil coloring process, employed for the production of crude playing cards, picture postcards, and cheap popular prints during the nineteenth century. At the turn of the century, French artists began to experiment with more sophisticated techniques suitable for decorative applications. With only one or two stencils they could achieve subtle nuances of color in stylized vignettes and ornamental borders, but far more complex effects were possible. They developed a technique of analyzing a color image, breaking it down to its component parts, and then reassembling it with as many as a hundred stencils, each imparting a different color or texture, a few minute details at a time. A skilled craftsman called the découpeur cut the stencils with a straight-edged knife, like an Exacto knife. Originally, the stencils were made of thin sheets of copper, zinc, or aluminum, which were more durable but less convenient than the transparent celluloid or plastic sheets that were preferred in later years. The stencils were then given to the coloristes, who applied the pigments using the characteristic stubby brushes called pompons along with sponges and other tools for spraying, splattering, or daubing colors. Some studios kept in stock as many as six hundred brushes, since each one could be used only for a single color.

When the pochoir trade was at its peak, there may have been as many as thirty studios in Paris employing six hundred workers, mostly women and children who did the job of coloristes. The coloristes were paid by piece work, that is, by the number of sheets they finished on any given day. In a New York sweatshop, the colorists were paid fifty cents for a thousand sheets, but they could set their own hours and come and go when they pleased. In Paris, the studios stayed open day and night to keep up with the demand for luxury illustration.

Jean Saudé ran the most prominent pochoir workshop in Paris and explained what it could do in his magnificent Traité d'enluminure d'art au pochoir, published in 1925. Saudé not only wrote instructions for the practice of his craft but also a manifesto, arguing that it could be used for fine illustrated books and facsimiles of artwork as well as ordinary commercial design. He demonstrated the versatility of this medium, amenable to all types of coloration, ranging from a thick velvety gouache to a thin watercolor wash, from dull saturated tones to brilliant effects of gold and silver.

Among the regular customers of the Paris trade were architects and interior designers who wanted to promote their work in a sympathetic medium. Other illustration processes could not render quite so vividly the costly materials they might employ in a marble bathroom or the corner of a boudoir. In fact, an earlier version of Art Deco interior design was called “boudoir style,” referring to an ambience of opulence and intimacy fostered by divans and day beds with tassled cushions and other richly appointed furnishings.

Many pochoir artists learned their skills in fashion magazines, not the glossy and meretricious scandal sheets we see in newsstands today but substantial publications produced with grace, wit, and style. Even the advertisements contained some pochoir coloring in La gazette du bon ton (1912–1926), each issue containing around thirty pages of text and ten pochoir plates, each volume bound in full vellum, all edges gilt. These handmade color prints were expensive, and rightly so: they looked as luxurious as the products they promoted, the splendid clothes, lavish cars, and opulent home furnishings of the teens and twenties. Many of the most important Art Deco artists got their start in commercial design, serving a newly affluent middle-class willing and able to pay for consumer goods denoting wealth, status, and prestige. La gazette du bon ton employed Charles Martin, Georges Lepape, Umberto Brunelleschi, and George Barbier, whose work is always noteworthy for its expert draftsmanship, seductive colors, and wicked charm.

These commercial portfolios, brochures, and magazines impressed the avant-garde artists of that time and inspired some to explore new avenues of expression in books and prints. Man Ray, Sonia Delaunay, Marie Laurencin, Dufy, Foujita, Rouault, and Léger experimented with this process, sometimes creating innovative livres d'artiste like Man Ray's Revolving Doors (1926), Henri Matisse's Jazz (1947), and André Lansky's Cortège (1959), the latest book in the Fry Collection and one of the last luxury pochoir publications.

After the Second World War, the pochoir business went into a slow decline. The bold abstract collages in Cortège were entrusted to Maurice Beaufumé, who originally employed about twenty workers in his studio, but by the mid-1970s, he was reduced to one découpeuse to cut the stencils and two coloristes to apply the pigments. Pochoir failed for several reasons. First, the French trade in illustrated books was grossly overextended before the Depression, overburdened with too many publishers pushing too many books of doubtful quality; when the market collapsed, consumers turned against illustration with a revulsion that continues even now. Second, other illustration processes could imitate pochoir effects, most notably screen printing, which could simulate some of the opaque colors of pochoir. Third, these stencil-coloring methods were slow, inefficient, and expensive. At best, a coloriste might be able to manage one stencil at the rate of 500 sheets an hour, not very much in comparison to a four-color rotary printing press. Fourth, the workshops were not able to retain skilled personnel because their wages were no longer competitive after the war. The proprietors might have raised their wages if they could have raised their prices, but there wasn't enough demand for their wares to keep up with the cost of living and the rate of inflation.

Pochoir is no longer practiced on a commercial basis, although some artists now practice stencil techniques on a modest scale for prints and books issued in limited editions, severely limited because of the labor required. If now nearly extinct, it deserves to be remembered as the last of its kind, a commercial reproduction process executed entirely by hand. Dale Roylance must have been hard pressed to choose highlights of the Fry Collection for this exhibition, since he can show only so much, and has so much to show—more than two hundred books and albums containing over four thousand prints. Here he not only explains artistic techniques but also interprets the results, a rich resource for the study of art history, social history, and theories of design. Some of the best pochoir prints were meant to be no more than precious trifles, reporting the vagaries of fashion and the whims of the avant-garde during a brief period of prosperity after the Armistice and before the Crash. Costly and ephemeral even then, they are now invaluable cultural artifacts retaining the charm of a bygone era and constituting a living legacy of handmade articles clearly superior to the products of the machine.

—John Bidwell
The Pierpont Morgan Library

■ Early Stencil Printing in Europe & Japan ■

The use of cutout stencils for applying color to prints is the technical basis for French pochoir, the hand coloring method that would be brought to perfection in 1920s Paris. The stencil process had its early history in both Europe and the Orient. As early as the fifteenth century, many woodcut prints and playing cards had color added by daubing actual paint through the cutout pattern incised in sheets of thin copper or card stock. Such early work became a craft trade of its own; a famous German book of trades, published in 1568, shows a woodcut of the stencil “illuminator,” or Briefffmaler, with a revealing caption written by Hans Sachs and translated:

*A Gilder of Books am I
A Brush my daily Bread supplies
I tint all pictures on paper or parchment
With gold, bright colors, and dyes.*

Jost Amman, woodcut of the stencil colorer, from Hartmann Schopper's Panoplia Omnium . . . (Frankfurt: Segismund Feyerabend, 1568). Graphic Arts Collection, Princeton University Library.

The “gold, bright colors, and dyes,” applied directly by stencil throughout an entire edition of multiple copies, presented a time-saving simplification to hand coloring and was soon applied to the mass production of popular prints and playing cards. Such imagerie populaire became a commonplace but crude alternative to the finely produced artist’s print. At the end of the nineteenth century, however, a few French artists rediscovered stencil as a printing technique capable of considerable refinement. Mastery of the complexities of stencil incision and color mixing yielded a richness of actual watercolor or gouache pigment almost tactile in its surface quality. This subtle impasto result became known as pochoir and would be the new printmaking technique to introduce and richly illustrate time, place, and lifestyles that signified turn-of-the-century Art Nouveau and 1920s Art Deco.

Infanterie russe, woodcut with pochoir coloring,
(Metz, ca. 1850). Lent by Dale Roylance.

Japanese Connections

The stylistic development of Art Nouveau during the 1890s as well as Art Deco during the 1920s in France was partly due to the opening up of trade between Japan and the Western world. Among the first imports to Europe were not only porcelains, silks, and tea, but two Japanese color-printing crafts of startling beauty and refinement: color woodcut prints and color printing with stencils. French Impressionist painters such as Degas and Monet were enchanted by the woodcut prints, collected them, and even included them in their own work. Less well known are the elaborate Japanese color stencils known as katagami, long used in Japan for the printing of the most elaborate patterns on textiles.

Katagami stencil patterns from Japan, eighteenth and nineteenth century in Susanna Kuo, Carved Paper: The Art of Japanese Stencils (Santa Barbara: Santa Barbara Museum of Art, 1998).

Wonderful versatility of design and precision of workmanship are evident everywhere in the Japanese katagami. These most elaborate stencil cutouts were of such fragility that they had to be held together by silken threads or, it is said, by strands of human hair. The incised stencil plate was placed on the fabric to be printed, then a rice paste “resist” spread over it by means of special brushes. The “resist” reacted when the cloth was immersed in a pigmented dye bath, most often an indigo blue. The discovery of this Japanese stencil craft by the French in the late nineteenth century did much to stimulate their own pursuit of pochoir stencil work and the resulting color prints that would later come to illustrate the entire Parisian Art Deco period.

Katagami fabric sample from Tokyo, late nineteenth century. Graphic Arts Collection, Princeton University Library.

■ Art Nouveau Pochoir ■

An Art Nouveau poster artist, Maurice Pillard Verneuil, wrote the first French treatise on pochoir, L'ornementation par le pochoir, published in Paris around 1896. A masterwork of Art Nouveau printing and design, Maurice Dufrène's Un intérieur moderne, followed, published in Paris around 1900. The pochoir color plates of this portfolio are true marvels of watercolor stencil. Dufrène's elaborate designs are rendered in a subtle palette of greys, tans, pale blues, and mauve that bespeak the period of the fin-de-siècle and the most delicate Art Nouveau tonalities. Several of the plates even show stencil decoration to be used on the walls and furniture of this most luxurious apartment, presenting the last word in style at the end of the nineteenth century.

Maurice Dufrène, plate in pochoir from his Un intérieur moderne (Paris, ca. 1900). Charles Rahn Fry, Class of 1965 collection of books and prints in pochoir. All following plates are from the Fry collection, unless otherwise noted.

A Floral Progress from Art Nouveau to Art Deco

The decorative uses of stencil led to several extraordinary portfolios of Art Nouveau–influenced ornamentation in the 1890s. The plant world, with its tendrils, flowers, and curvilinear foliage, was the inspiration for many of these works, beginning with Eugène Grasset’s La plante et ses applications ornementales, published in Paris in 1896. In this work forty-eight species of flowering plants are shown in pochoir rendering, in progressive stages of stylization. The realistic representation of a favorite flower—the lily, for example—is seen, followed by its increasing stages of ornamental abstraction realized through the imagination of the artist. Art Deco pochoir prints would later carry the idea of image abstraction much further, foreseeing the rise of modernism in the first decades of the new century.

Eugène Grasset, plates in pochoir from La plante et ses applications ornementales (Paris, 1896).

■ Pochoir: The Ultimate Art Deco Color Print ■

Art Deco, the flamboyantly modern style that followed Art Nouveau, not only supplied the Parisian social and cultural beau monde of the 1920s with a distinctive new look, but also soon influenced both Europe and America with a twentieth-century sophistication, urbanity, and heightened sense of the art of living. It was a time, now just under a century ago, when all the gentle amenities and accoutrements of daily life would inspire new and imaginative designs of every sort. In all of the decorative arts as well as in art and architecture, music and dance, a new style was born. The pace of change was quickened, and the fashion of the moment became ever more important. Couturiers and fashion arbiters, jewelry and furniture makers, parfumeurs, milliners, and interior decorators began to share unheard-of glamour with actors, musicians, and dancers as well as creative artists.

Dressmakers such as Worth, Doucet, Poiret, Iribe, and Lanvin came to be known by their last names, achieved celebrity status, and acquired unprecedented influence as cultural arbiters. Their fame and fortune was cleverly established and spread through a new proliferation of a particular type of print known as the fashion plate.

Charles Martin, "Le choix difficile," plate in pochoir from Journal des dames et des modes (Paris, 1914).

Development of Fashion Plates, from Woodcut to Pochoir

Printed pictures of fashionably dressed women first appeared in history almost as early as the invention of printing itself. The first illustrated edition of Boccaccio's De Claris Mulieribus in 1473 displays woodcuts of such robust heroines as Judith and Sappho, dressed not in antique costume but in the height of fifteenth-century fashion. The Renaissance in Italy brought new displays of feminine finery, well seen in such early fashion plate books as Vecellio's De Gli Habiti . . ., printed in Venice in 1590. Baroque and Rococo styles brought fancy lace collars and voluminous skirts of seemingly endless excess, followed in Victorian times by the prim, well-buttoned, and tightly corseted ladies seen in Godey's Lady's Book. In such prints we discover not only the history of costume but many telling details of each period. In pochoir fashion plates of the early twentieth century, we will also find abundant record of the modes and manners of Art Deco times.

Boccaccio, De Claris Mulieribus (Ulm: Johann Zainer, 1473).
The Scheide Library.

Paul Poiret & Twentieth-Century Fashion Design

The modern fashion plate had its debut and fullest flowering in the first decades of the twentieth century. The fin-de-siècle mood of the nineteenth century was almost over. Queen Victoria died in 1901, and Oscar Wilde died in 1900 in a Paris hotel room with his attributed last words, “Either this wallpaper goes, or I do.” Following Victoria’s and Oscar’s departure, the gloom of Victorian fashion—including wallpaper design—did indeed change.

The most enterprising new Parisian couturier of the day, Paul Poiret, introduced himself to high society and all of the crowned heads of Europe in his self-promoting catalogue, Les robes de Paul Poiret. Illustrated by the young artist Paul Iribe in original, highly colorful stencil prints, this first landmark album of Art Deco fashion plates began a new, far more liberalized image of women through high fashion.

Paul Iribe, plate in pochoir in Les robes de Paul Poiret (Paris, 1908).

Pochoir Fashion Plates

Poiret's first album, Les robes . . ., was so successful that he issued a second pochoir illustrated catalogue of his latest designs, Les choses . . ., this time illustrated with even more bravura and panache by a young discovery, Georges Lepape. This album firmly established the celebrity reputation of both Poiret and Lepape—Poiret as the new leader of Parisian haute couture and Lepape as the most clever of the many new fashion plate artists now working in pochoir.

Georges Lepape, plate in pochoir in Les choses de Paul Poiret (Paris, 1911).

■ Parisian Fashion Journals in Wartime ■

Soon after Poiret's albums, the idea of color print publication in pochoir caught firm hold in a series of extraordinary new fashion magazines. The first of these was La gazette du bon ton, published from 1912 to 1915 by entrepreneur Lucien Vogel. Style and format were of the finest quality and set off the best art work as well as fashion of the day in pochoir. The work of Georges Lepape, Poiret's protégé, is seen in many of the finest plates. Writers and critics of importance included Claude Roger-Marx and Jean Giraudoux. Several equally fine fashion journals also appeared in 1912, all to great success. Journal des dames et des modes began in the best tradition of French eighteenth-century typography; Modes et manières d'aujourd'hui, 1914–1919, became an annual portfolio of the new pochoir artists. All embodied the elegant, sophisticated style of the day in both art and text. It was a French pictorial and cultural tradition that would survive as a model of style and taste into the 1930s and 1940s with such lavishly artistic journals as Minotaure and Verve.

George Barbier, dust jacket for La guirlande des mois (Paris, 1919).

Paris & World War I, 1914–1918

A tribute to the resilience of the French spirit even in wartime may be seen in the new fashion journals that appeared in Paris from 1912 through the 1920s. La gazette du bon ton and another contemporary journal, Modes et manières d'aujourd'hui, published from 1912 through 1922, kept a remarkably buoyant outlook despite the German threat, with a burst of joy at the war's end in 1918. The Modes et manières issue of 1919 shows well this après guerre jubilation with designs by one of the best of early pochoir artists, André Marty. New diversions also appear here, including the early Hollywood cinema, with Charlie Chaplin appearing in one plate, Rudolph Valentino in another.

André Marty, “Le ciné,” plate in pochoir from Modes et manières d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1919).

■ Exoticism—Schéhérazade in Paris ■

The European premiere of Diaghilev's Ballets Russes in Paris in 1908 was a sensation and became a turning point in modernism in all the arts. Léon Bakst, the brilliant designer of the sets and costumes for Les Ballets Russes, stayed on in Paris to become one of the period's most influential designers. His exotic, color-saturated design for the ballet's Schéhérazade—vivid reds, malachite green, and turquoise blue—excited French fashion to adopt similar color schemes far different from the pale grey and mauve of the now old-fashioned Art Nouveau. The bright new color spectrum would come to typify Art Deco, and by 1914 we have fashion plates, in truly vivid pochoir color, of nubile French girls posing as the new Schéhérazade.

Léon Bakst, plate in pochoir from “Peri” costume designed for Les Ballets Russes (Paris, 1911). Theatre Collection, Princeton University Library.

Exoticism as Prelude to Art Deco

The exotic influence of Les Ballets Russes and its Schéhérazade was phenomenal; it turned the fashion world of Paris into an extravagant Persian bazaar. The energetic couturier Paul Poiret, already high arbiter of women's dress design, had developed his own passion for the magic of the Arabian Nights and introduced harem skirts, silk pants, and—as a Poiret signature touch—gold lamé turbans flaunting egret plumes. Egret birds of Florida almost became extinct to supply fashion with enough feathers. Self-styled as a Persian pasha, Poiret even gave a lavish costume ball which he called “A Thousand and Two Nights.”

Georges Lepape, “Lady in a Turban,” plate in pochoir in
Les choses de Paul Poiret (Paris, 1911).

George Barbier: 1882–1932

The pochoir artist most clearly identified with 1920s exoticism was George Barbier. Inspired by Les Ballets Russes' debut in 1908, the young Barbier created two elegant souvenir albums, one of the great Nijinsky (1913), another of Karsavina (1914). These pochoir landmark books were followed by many provocative pochoir fashion plates for the best Parisian fashion journals of the day, including the memorable Barbier version of Schéhérazade for Modes et manières d'aujourd'hui of 1914. But for sheer elegance of style and production, a miniature ladies' almanac called La guirlande des mois surpassed even the preciousness of its eighteenth-century precedents. Issues of these ladies' almanacs, bound in silk or stamped in gold, are pochoir jewel boxes filled with Barbier miniatures, including prints of such exotic traditional themes as "The Continents": "L'Asie," "L'Afrique," "L'Océanie," and "L'Amérique." All appear as exotic costume prints, but "L'Europe" is a stylish Parisian salon. Another series of prints, "The Seven Deadly Sins" from Barbier's Falbalas et fanfreluches, also betrays the artist's sophisticated, free-wheeling spirit, with all seven sins made oddly tempting by the charm of Barbier's art.

George Barbier, "L'Europe" and "L'Asie," plates in pochoir from
La guirlande des mois (Paris, 1921).

Art Deco Exoticism: Opium Dreams

From 1920 to 1924 George Barbier worked on a series of oversize designs that would be his masterwork: Le bonheur du jour ou les graces à la mode. These extraordinary prints, executed with the utmost skill and delicacy of the pochoir technique, present Barbier's summing up of the Parisian 1920s creed: good times, beautiful people, erotic dalliance, and the exotic lifestyle. Even the drug scene escapes moral censure, as seen in one of the plates from Le bonheur du jour portraying languid smokers in a fantastic setting of red lacquer, Chinese dragon, and Mandarin-like servant in a very glamorous opium den.

George Barbier, "Chez la marchande des pavots," plate in pochoir from Le bonheur du jour (Paris, ca. 1924).

Art Deco Exoticism: Lacquer Screens . . .

A swiftly adopted Chinese taste that swept over Paris in the 1920s was Oriental lacquer. In another of Barbier's plates from Le bonheur du jour, he places two Schéhérazade-like mannequins arranging lotus flowers in front of a Coromandel black lacquer screen. Known as Coromandel from its Chinese center of origin, the technique was applied not only to screens, but furniture, boxes, and even fine book bindings. A Parisian artist-bookbinder, Jean Dunand, became the master artisan of fine lacquer work with glowing inset lacquer doublures in his fine bindings. The signature Art Deco lacquer screens for the Normandie ocean liner were also by Dunand.

George Barbier, "Le gout des lacques" (The Taste for Lacquer), plate in pochoir from Le bonheur du jour . . . (Paris, ca. 1924).

& Pillow Prints

The new Parisian vogue for the most exotic modes and manners not only introduced Turkish-style turbans and harem skirts à la Poiret and lacquer screens à la Coromandel, but decorative details of Arabian Nights decor as well. The pochoir color prints of the period reveal the often recurring inclusion of luxurious piles of plush, multicolored pillows. These serve as instant Oriental divans for languid Parisiennes as odalisques. The message is one of truly lazy chic, with more than a suggestion of Schéhérazade and the harem. In Japan, “pillow books” were manuals for young ladies on how to make love; in 1920s Paris, “pillow prints” suggested just such thoughts abetted by a soft nest of pillow comfort. The color and abstract patterning of the pillow prints also foreshadow the fascination with decorative abstraction and color that would play such an important part in the Art Deco style.

Janine Aghion, plate in pochoir from The Essence of the Mode of the Day (Paris, 1920?).

Dance Exoticism: The Latin Tango

The worldly sophistication of Paris in the 1920s embraced not only Russian, Turkish, and Persian exoticism, but Spanish and Latin American culture as well; pochoir printmakers were fond of the image of Latin señoritas in native costumes, lounging in tropical settings of palm fronds and parrots. But the great Latin American cultural import was the tango. This sensually exotic dance became one of the most enduring of the many popular dance crazes of the 1920s and is still very much alive today, both in popular music and in the modern tangos of Astor Piazzolla.

George Barbier, “La folie du jour,” plate in pochoir from Journal des dames et des modes (Paris, 1913).

George Barbier, "La danse," plate in pochoir from Modes et manières d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1914).

■ New Music & Dance ■

Two pochoir plates from Modes et manières d'aujourd'hui of 1919 are revealing studies of the enthusiastic French acceptance of Negro music and dance. One, by Georges Lepape, shows a fox trot, another new dance craze, with a trio of black banjo players. The other print, called “Le bal des sauvages,” shows the artist’s odd ideas of primitive masks and costumes. More remarkable are the decor details: a wall print showing a slave ship, and an African sculpture.

André Marty, “Le bal des sauvages,” plate in pochoir from
Modes et manières d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1919).

Le Jazz Hot & Josephine Baker

In 1925, at the Théâtre des Champs-Élysées in Paris, a group of jazz musicians from New York's Harlem opened its historic show, La Revue Nègre. Its young star was Josephine Baker. The opening night of October 2, 1925, was memorably described by Janet Flanner, Paris correspondent for the New Yorker under the name Genet, in her memoir, Paris Was Yesterday:

[Josephine Baker] made her entry entirely nude except for a pink flamingo feather between her limbs; she was being carried upside down and doing the split on the shoulder of a black giant [Joe Alex]. . . . She was an unforgettable female ebony statue . . . a new model that to the French proved for the first time that black was beautiful, and the acute response of the white masculine public in the capital of hedonism of all Europe—Paris.

The spectacular success of jazz and Josephine Baker in 1920s Paris had its own graphic record in several pochoir albums created by Paul Colin, culminating in 1927 in a large folio of pochoir prints entitled Le tumulte noir.

Paul Colin, plate in pochoir from Marcel Sauvage, Voyages et aventures de Joséphine Baker (Paris, 1931).

Prints & Music “Pour le Piano”

The Roaring Twenties of tango and jazz had another, more genteel, side. A great generation of classical French composers, including Debussy, Poulenc, Milhaud, Satie, and Ravel, was at its productive peak. It was also a golden period in the special French tradition of music written for the pianoforte. This flowering of literature written for the piano is found charmingly documented in contemporary pochoir fashion plates. Inscribed below one such print are the lines: “Parmi la volupté de ce decor choisi / Elle joue, avant diner, du Claude Debussy.” And on the sheet music cover held by the singer portrayed in another such print, the name of the composer Darius Milhaud appears. Still another print, “En écoutant Satie,” shows a blasé party of music lovers raptly listening to the music of Erik Satie.

The manufacture of fine French pianos was also flourishing, as witnessed in the frequent Gaveau piano advertisements in the fashion magazine La gazette du bon ton and the Pleyel piano so evident in the Matisse painting of 1916–1917, “The Piano Lesson.”

Charles Martin, “La musique . . .,” pochoir print
from Modes et manières d’aujourd’hui (Paris, 1913).

Female Soloists

The pochoir fashion magazines also include illustration of the rich tradition of French music and art song, from prints of Renaissance revival instruments such as the theorbo, played by a Paquin-attired lady, to salon musicales given by modern, very fashionably dressed singers. But the poor male accompanist in one print suffers casual dismemberment, with only one hand and two odd feet just making it into the picture. This kind of cutoff became almost standard treatment for men in fashion plates. While women are conspicuously central, men are usually marginal, presenting a consistent gender hierarchy in many such prints.

Pierre Brissaud, “Quatre a sept . . .,” plate in pochoir from
La gazette du bon ton (May 1913).

■ Gender Studies: Feminist Overtures ■

Female independence, including votes for women, was gaining world-wide acceptance in the early 1920s. Timely echoes of this are found in many pochoir color prints of the day in the form of an appropriate poetic emblem, the uncaged bird. In these prints the fashion heroine sets free her parrot or other pet bird from its cage and waits for it to fly into the open air. Similar double meanings may be easily read into

Charles Martin, "Costume parisien," plate in pochoir from a provocative Barbier pochoir print of 1919, where the bizarrely costumed lady turns her back on her margin-clipped male companion with the Garbo-like remark, “Leave me alone!” This print is also interesting for what would become a rigid compositional formula in fashion plates: expanded sky for most of the background; a very low horizon line; and the model seen in a classic model posture used to this day: right foot in profile, left foot en pointe, and standing in central confrontation directly on the frame line.
Journal des dames et des modes (Paris, 1913).

George Barbier, “Laissez-moi-seule!” plate in pochoir from Feuillets d’art (Paris, 1919).

André Marty, “La séance de portrait,” plate in pochoir from La gazette du bon ton (Paris, 1914).

Paul Poiret, plate in pochoir from La gazette du bon genre, (Paris, 1922).

Gender Studies: Fashion Plate Men

A sharp eye will discover hard-to-find, curiously dismembered male body parts scattered among the many full-figured females dominating fashion plates of the time. Severed arms and hands deliver secret love letters in certain prints; bisected young men slip through the outer margins in others. The artist as foot-crossed leg and ghostly hand paints a study of the female model in one remarkable print. In another, a mirror reflects a vain lady with only fleeting images of her male escort. More full-bodied men do appear, but when they do, they seem to be in uniform as much as they were during the war: helmeted sports uniforms or the classic male uniform: top hat and tails.

Bernard Boutet de Monvel, "La cape noire," plate in pochoir from
La gazette du bon ton, (Paris, 1913).

Nouvelle Couture

By the late 1920s, French high fashion began to reach new extremes in luxury. What had begun as the intimate dress salons of Paul Poiret and Lanvin now became French national industries on the scale of Filatures Prouvost and Revillon Frères. Both of these very prosperous firms issued annual catalogues illustrated by the most brilliant of designs in pochoir color. The Modigliani-influenced artist Edouardo Benito did several catalogue series full of attenuated models dressed to the teeth whether pursuing such casual routines as feeding the goldfish or driving the Rolls-Royce. Such sumptuous fashion catalogues also launched big business advertising in the Art Deco period, combining, with great international success, French elegance and a new chic and audacity worthy of the Folies Bergère.

Léon Benigni, plate in pochoir from Été, the Filatures Prouvost fashion catalogue (Paris, 1929).

Haute Couture Caricature

Every extreme is an easy target for caricature, and high fashion of the early twentieth century was no exception. An Italian artist, Enrico Sacchetti, came to Paris to establish himself as a brilliant observer of the current fashion scene. His parodies in pochoir of overdressed women in the latest styles exaggerate all the little high fashion absurdities: too fat or too lean types wear all the wrong outfits, flash excessively toothsome smiles, and twist themselves on tiny feet into absurd postures. Under the nom de plume of SEM, Sacchetti published many such satirical high fashion plates in pochoir.

SEM, plate in pochoir from Le vrai et le faux chic (Paris, 1914).

Pochoir for Children's Books

The natural appeal of color also led to the early use of stencil pochoir as a wonderful way to enhance children's book illustration. One of the first and best pochoir illustrators for the young was Edy Legrand. His Macao & Cosmage, ou l'Experience du bonheur is a masterpiece of both color and imagination, telling a fantastic Robinson Crusoe-like tale of a boy's trip to the tropics and back. Legrand's pictures are, as Gordon Ray said in his Oxford lecture on pochoir, "fairly ablaze" with vivid color and freedom of design. Princeton's copy has been further enriched by a modern full leather custom binding, in an Art Deco manner, by Gérard Charrière.

Edy Legrand, plate in pochoir from Macao & Cosmage, ou l'Experience du bonheur (Paris, 1919). Graphic Arts Collection, Princeton University Library. Gift of JoAnna Agle in memory of her husband, Charles Agle, Class of 1929.

■ Art Deco & Modern Art ■

The beginnings of modern art, most notably stylized abstraction, cubism, and non-figurative art, have interesting connections with Art Deco. The basic ideas of breaking down realism and refiguring form appear through the 1870s to the 1920s in the ornamental abstractions of E. A. Séguy and Edouard Benedictus. Both artists pursued a fresh new grammar of ornament expressive of their own times, and both began a creative fever among many designers of the day to create their own portfolios in color pochoir. Séguy shows in his many portfolios a progress from realistic to abstract portrayal; Benedictus adapts Cézanne's cube, cone, and sphere to his own abstracted landscape geometry.

Edouard Benedictus, detail of plate in pochoir from his Nouvelles variations (Paris, ca. 1926).

Art Deco & Cubism

The intense pursuit of a new modern grammar of ornament by Séguy and Benedictus inspired other pochoir artists, among them two foreign artists attracted to Paris as the center of modern art: the Russian Serge Gladky and the Italian Futurist Gino Severini. Both reveal in their pochoir semi-abstract still-life designs the cubism so strongly favored from 1907 to 1920 by Picasso and Braque.

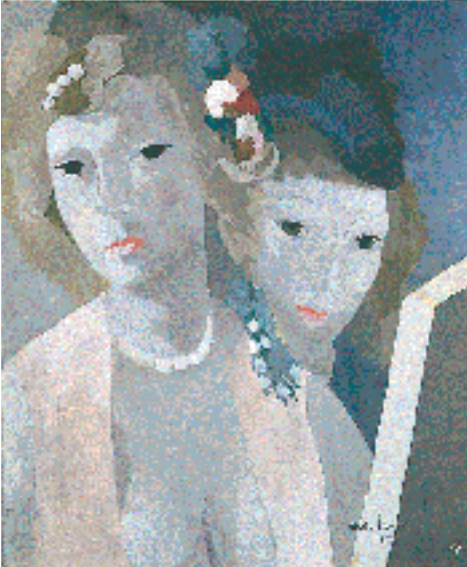

Gino Severini, plate in pochoir from his Fleurs et masques (London, 1930).

Two Women's Art in Pochoir

One of the most curiously favored women among the 1920s' modernist painters of Paris was Marie Laurencin. She lived with poet and critic Apollinaire, was a close friend of Picasso, Braque, and Matisse, and painted countless pictures on the single theme of pale, mysteriously pretty, but unsmiling young girls. She resisted all the modern art influences around her, creating instead her own enigmatic dream world inhabited only by women.

Another important woman artist of the Art Deco period, Sonia Delaunay, came as Sonya Terk from Russia to Paris, where she married the important early color abstractionist painter Robert Delaunay. Both developed a luminous color style known as Orphism. Her style combined Russian peasant primitive with a new urban sophistication. Unlike Laurencin's pale studies, Delaunay's designs were full of rich color and vigorous energy.

Marie Laurencin, plate in pochoir from
Deuxième album . . . (Paris, ca. 1930).

Sonia Delaunay, plate in pochoir from Sonia Delaunay, ses peintures, ses objets, ses tissus simultanés, ses modes (Paris, 1925<sup>2</sup>).

Man Ray & Léger in Pochoir

Man Ray and Fernand Léger were two of the most versatile of the modern painters working in Paris in the 1920s. Both experimented with photography and film, both were leaders in avant-garde modernism, and both left significant works in pochoir color printing. Man Ray's Revolving Doors of 1916–1917 is a series of ten folio pochoir abstractions with suggestive titles regarding their subject. Léger, who was fascinated by machinery construction forms of the twentieth century, created a cubist style celebrating modern technology and the working man. His most important works in pochoir were the illustrations for Blaise Cendrars' La fin du monde . . . of 1919. Pochoir printing was also used for Léger's exhibit invitation at Léonce Rosenberg's L'Effort Moderne gallery in Paris, with F. Léger in a typical stencil-alphabet form.

Fernand Léger, pochoir invitation to Rosenberg's gallery opening (Paris, 1919).

Modern Art Documents in Pochoir

The true pigment color of pochoir printing lent itself equally well to the most celebrated of modern artists, Pablo Picasso, as it did to such nearly forgotten artists as Auguste Herbin [1882–1960], who developed a modern movement known as “Abstract Creation.” Herbin believed in the inherent expression of pure color. His bold color abstractions are well demonstrated in his pochoir book L’art non-figuratif . . . and in another Rosenberg Gallery invitation printed in pochoir.

Picasso’s landmark painting of 1907, Les demoiselles d’Avignon, portraying in cubist fashion an Avignon brothel, shocked all Paris, then the world. La gazette du bon ton included a pochoir caricature of the Picasso “ladies” by Boussingault. Picasso’s work in stage design, including his brilliant realization of the sets and costumes for The Three-Cornered Hat by Manuel de Falla, is also rediscovered in pochoir rendering.

Pablo Picasso, plate in pochoir of his design for a stage curtain (Paris, 1925).
Graphic Arts Collection, Princeton University Library.

A Matisse Masterpiece in Pochoir

In a later decade, the technique of color printing in pochoir had its finest hour. Henri Matisse, bedridden by illness in 1944 and unable to paint, created through cutouts of colored paper his vibrant testimonial to color and music, Jazz. Printed in pochoir, this Matisse folio has become the consummate artist's book of the twentieth century. The folio's twenty illustrations in Edmond Vairel's pochoir after the Matisse cutouts has also become one of the most desirable, as well as most expensive, books of the century.

Henri Matisse, plate in pochoir announcing the publication of Jazz (Paris, 1947).
Graphics Arts Collection, Princeton University Library.

Henri Matisse, Jazz (Paris, 1947). Plate in pochoir from Verve (Paris, 1949).
Rare Books Collection, Princeton University Library.

Three designs for Éventails de Paquin by George Barbier and Paul Iribe.
 Plate in pochoir from
Journal des dames et des modes (Paris, 1914).

■ Personal Adornments ■

Art Deco moderne transferred itself very easily from fashion plates to all the newly developed enhancements of femininity. Cosmetics, perfumes, and “beauty culture” became big business and were among the first to benefit from alluring packaging and advertising in Art Deco style. Pochoir coloring gave the full-page advertisements of Helena Rubenstein and Edouard Pinaud beauty products a new selling image, as did fancy Art Deco design packaging for perfume bottles, face powder boxes, and even soap labels. The same was true of all those elegant accoutrements of the fair sex: hats, fans, ribbons, parasols, gloves, and, above all, jewelry.

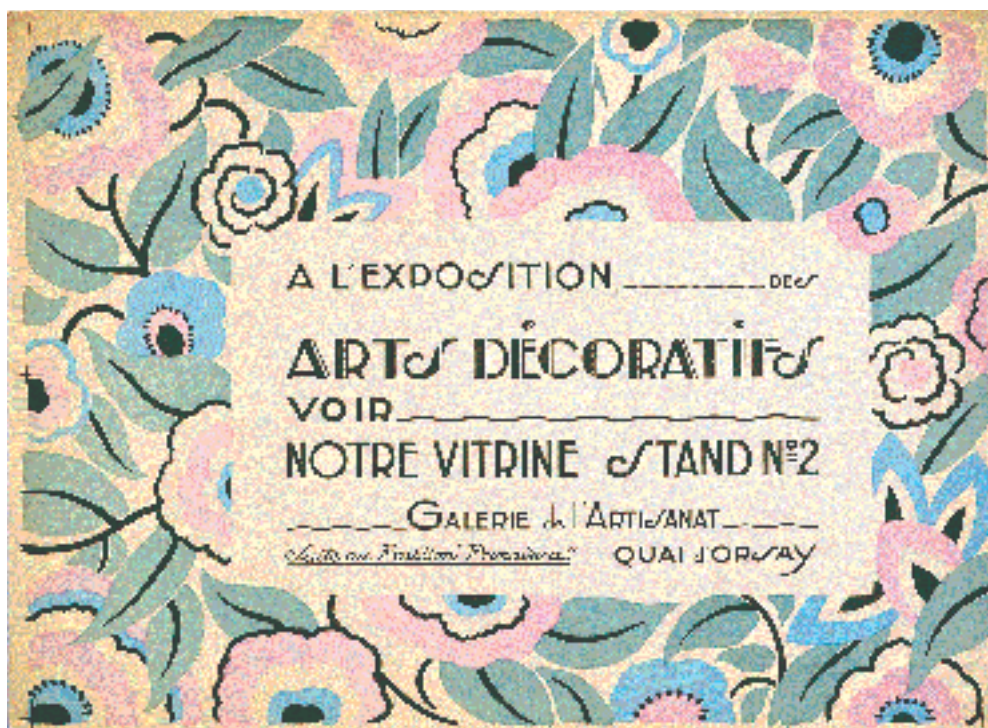

Diamond and emerald jewelry designed by
Vever and Morgan, plate in pochoir from
Journal des dames et des modes
(Paris, 1915).

■ Paris 1925: L'Exposition des Arts Décoratifs ■

Art Deco derives its name from the international fair for decorative arts held in Paris in 1925. The fair made it abundantly clear that for art and architecture, furniture and textile design—indeed all decorative arts—Paris was now the center of the world. All of the best ateliers of craftsmen, designers, and architects in France were represented amid pavilions and gardens to demonstrate the clear superiority of the French in the arts of design in the 1920s. The architect Le Corbusier, despite his disdain for the decorative arts, was represented by his Pavillon de l'Esprit Nouveau.

L'exposition internationale des arts décoratifs et industriels modernes, poster (Paris, 1925). Graphic Arts Collection, Princeton University Library.

Saudé's 1925 Treatise on Pochoir

In addition to the 1925 Paris exposition on the decorative arts, the color printing technique of pochoir had its own celebration in the same year when Jean Saudé, the most skilled of pochoir printers, published his Traité d'enluminure d'art au pochoir. Saudé succeeded André Marty as the Parisian master of pochoir; his atelier trained the best printers to follow, including Daniel and André Jacomet.

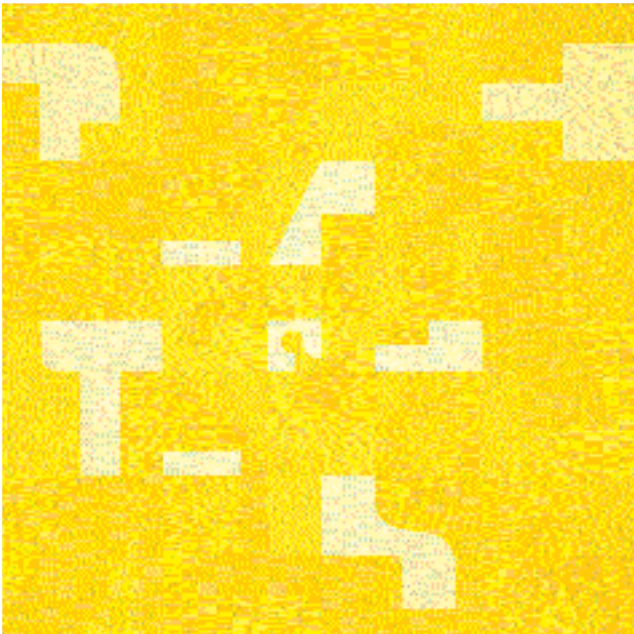

Saudé's remarkable treatise remains the most complete summing up of the pochoir technique and is replete with original examples by Saudé himself, Benedictus, and other pupils. Printed in a limited edition of 500 copies, this work is the definitive demonstration of pochoir printing. Now a nearly lost art, pochoir was the true color printing method of choice throughout the 1920s.

Jean Saudé, Traité d'enluminure d'art au pochoir
(Paris, 1925).

Pochoir Postscript

In America, Art Deco has left its monuments from coast to coast. Hollywood, Miami Beach, and New York City are all much richer for their remaining Art Deco heritage, which includes such wonders as New York's Chrysler Building, Radio City Music Hall, and Rockefeller Center. The Art Deco graphic art of stencil pochoir, although now rare, also has fine examples closer to our own day. Serigraphy, or silkscreen printing, a modern variant of pochoir through its use of stencil, flourished through the 1940s and 1950s. More authentic pochoir has also appeared in illustrated books, to great artistic effect, in more recent times. Outstanding examples include Jean Hugo's charming pochoir vignettes used in the Overbrook Press edition of Robert Louis Stevenson's An Inland Voyage [1937]. In contemporary art we find the use of serigraphy and pochoir as a form of color field art in the works of Josef Albers and Norman Ives. The most spectacular and most recent color pochoir is the grand folio Cortège, with its twenty-three full-page abstractions by André Lansky, printed in brilliant, true pochoir by Maurice Beaufumé.

Norman Ives, serigraph print (New Haven, 1970).
Graphic Arts Collection, Princeton University Library.

André Lansky, detail from plate in pochoir in Pierre Lecuire, Cortège (Paris, 1959).

*Illustrated Books, Fashion Periodicals,
Prints, and Portfolios in the Collection of Pochoir Color Prints formed by Charles Rahn Fry,
Princeton University Class of 1965*

Illustrated Books

JANINE AGHION

- The essence of the mode of the day, Paris 1920. A serie [sic] of fifteen drawings by Mademoiselle Janine Aghion. Paris: La Belle Édition, [1920?] [FRY 2]

Grains de poivre, by Franz Toussaint. Illustrations de Janine Aghion. Paris: André Delpeuch, Éditeur, 1927. [FRY 45]

PAUL ALLIER

4 estampes pour orner votre chambre par Paul Allier. [Paris?, ca. 1920]. [FRY 4]

Les quatre saisons. Estampes par Paul Allier. Paris: Galerie Lutétia, [ca. 1920?]. Four pochoir color prints in portfolio. [FRY 3]

GUY ARNOUX

A propos de chansons. Récits pour les enfants par Marcelle Fauchier-Delavigne. Orné d'images en couleurs par Guy Arnoux, artiste à Paris. Paris: Berger-Levrault, Éditeurs, 1918. [FRY 196]

La belle Eugénie, by Marc Elder [pseud.]. Illustrations de Guy Arnoux. Paris: Les Éditions Pittoresques, 1929. [FRY 46]

Chansons du marin français au temps de la marine en bois, recueillies et illustrées par Guy Arnoux. Paris: Devambez, Éditeur, 1918. [FRY 49]

Les femmes de ce temps. Réflexions de René Kerdyk. Images par Guy Arnoux. Paris: A l'Enseigne du Masque d'Or, 1920. [FRY 5]

Nos frères d'Amérique. Texte de Roger Boutet de Monvel; images de Guy Arnoux. Paris: Chez Devambez, no date. [FRY 58]

St.-Cendre de Maurice Maindron. Illustré par Guy Arnoux. Paris: Éditions Mornay, 1930. [FRY 200]

Vieille marine. 12 Images de Guy Arnoux présentées à la Lanterne Magique par Claude Farrère. Paris: Chez Devambez, A l'Enseigne du Masque d'Or, 1920. [FRY 47]

LÉON BAKST

Leon Bakst; 42 Tafeln und 6 Abbildungen mit einer Einleitung von Carl Einstein. Berlin: Verlag Ernst Wasmuth A.-G., [ca. 1930?]. [FRY 7]

GEORGE BARBIER

Album dédié à Tamar Karsavina par George Barbier et Jean-Louis Vaudoyer. Paris: Collections Pierre Corrad, 1914. [FRY 8]

■ Le bonheur du jour ou Les grâces à la mode. Texte et dessins par George Barbier. Paris: Chez Meynial, [1924]. [FRY 9]

Le carrosse aux deux lézards verts, by René Boylesve de l'Académie Française. Conte de fées. Orné d'aquarelles de George Barbier. Paris: Aux Éditions de la Guirlande, 1921 [FRY 50].

La double maîtresse par Henri de Régnier de l'Académie Française. Illustrations par George Barbier. Paris: A. & G. Mornay, Éditeurs, 1928. [FRY 51]

Falbalas & fanfreluches. Almanach des Modes présentes, passées et futures. Paris: Meynial, éditeur, 1922–1926. Five issues. [FRY 11]

■ La guirlande des mois. Avec des images de George Barbier. Paris: Jules Meynial, 1917–1921. 5 volumes. [FRY 12]

Panorama dramatique. Casanova; décors et costumes par George Barbier. Paris: Aux éditions Lucien Vogel, 1921. [FRY 10]

CHARLES BEAUDELAIRE

Les paradis artificiels par Charles Beaudelaire. Édition ornée de miniatures tirées de manuscrits orientaux relatifs à l'opium & au haschisch. Paris: Aux Aldes [1928]. 2 volumes. [FRY 105]

BEAUDIN ET AL.

La peinture moderne et l'art du tissu imprimé (Rapport des couleurs). No place, [ca. 1930]. [FRY 150]

LÉON BÉNIGNI

■ Été 1929. Filatures Prouvost. Text by Suzanne Cazaux. [Paris?]: Filatures Prouvost, 1929. [FRY 13]

La mode en 1930. Par Suzanne Cazaux. [Paris?]: Filatures Prouvost & Cie, 1930. [FRY 14]

ÉDOUARD GARCIA BENITO

La dernière lettre persane; mise en français par M. Zamacoïs et accompagnée de douze dessins exécutés dans le gout persan par Benito. Paris: Edité par La Maison Fourrures Max, [ca. 1920]. [FRY 15]

CHRISTIAN BÉRARD

Sodome et Gomorrhe. Pièce en deux actes, by Jean Giraudoux. Illustrations de Christian Bérard. Paris: Bernard Grasset, Éditeur, 1943. [FRY 53]

MAURICE BERTY

Histoire de Manon Lescaut et du Chevalier des Grieux par L'Abbé Prévost. Aquarelles de Maurice Berty. Paris: Éditions Nilsson, 1928. [FRY 203]

ROBERT BONFILS

Divertissements de princesses qui s'ennuient. 7 planches de Robert Bonfils présentées par René Chalupt. Paris: Librairie "Lutetia," 1918. [FRY 16]

La manière française; 20 images ou culs-de-lampe par Robert Bonfils avec une préface de Lucien Descaves. Paris: La Librairie "Lutétia," [ca. 1919]. [FRY 54]

Les rencontres de M. de Bréot, roman, by Henri de Régner de l'Académie Française. Illustrations de Robert Bonfils. Paris: Editions René Kieffer, 1919. [FRY 56]

Le trèfle rouge, ou, Les amants singuliers, by Henri de Régner de l'Académie Française. Illustrations de Robert Bonfils. Paris: La Renaissance du Livre, 1920. [FRY 55]

ÉMILE-ANTOINE BOURDELLE

La Reine de Saba. Selon le texte et la traduction du Dr. J.-C. Mardrus et ornée d'aquarelles par É.-A. Bourdelle. Paris: Société Littéraire de France, 1922. [FRY 57]

GEORGES BRAQUE

Les facheux. (Ballet en un acte de Boris Kochno). Théâtre Serge de Diaghilew. Vol. I: Georges Braque, Jean Cocteau, Louis Laloy, Georges Auric. Vol. II: Réalisation scénique. Paris: Éditions des Quatre Chemins, 1924. [FRY 17]

GEORGES BRAQUE ET AL.

Dix reproductions 1933. Braque–Derain–Dufy–Gris–Léger–Lurçat–Masson–Matisse–Picasso–Rouault. Paris: Editions Jeanne Bucher, 1933; New York: Editions John Becker, 1933. [FRY 69]

UMBERTO BRUNELLESCHI

Le malheureux petit voyage, by Gabriel Soulages. Agrémenté de Quinze Illustrations en couleurs de Brunelleschi. Paris: L'Estampe Moderne, 1926. [FRY 61]

Les masques et les personnages de la comédie italienne, expliqués par Gérard d'Houville [pseud.], et interprétés par Brunelleschi, en douze estampes coloriées. Paris: Aux bureaux de Journal des dames et des modes, éditeur, 1914. [FRY 18]

Phili ou Par-dela le bien et le mal, by Abel Hermant. Illustrations de Brunelleschi. Paris: Édition de la Guirlande, 1921. [FRY 59]

Le Radjah de Mazulipatam de Francis de Miomandre illustré par Brunelleschi. Paris: Éditions Mornay, 1926. [FRY 60]

ZYG BRUNNER

Plus ça change, by Rip. Féerie en deux actes et six tableaux représentée pour la première fois à Paris le 7 septembre 1915 au Théâtre Michel. Reprise au même théâtre en octobre 1918 et octobre 1919. Illustrations de Zyg Brunner. Paris: Éditions Lucien Vogel, 1922. [FRY 62]

ANTOINE CALBET

La cruche cassée, by Edmond Pilon. Illustrations de A. Calbet. Paris: Aux Éditions Colbert, 1943. [FRY 63]

CARLÈGLE (PSEUD.)

Les nouvelles leçons d'amour dans un parc de René Boylesve. Illustré par Carlègle [pseud.]. Paris: les Éditions Mornay, 1930. [FRY 64]

LÉON CARRÉ

Le chariot de terre cuite, by Victor Barrucand. D'après la pièce du théâtre indien attribuée au roi Soudraka. Illustrations de Léon Carré. Paris: L'Édition d'Art H. Piazza, 1921. [FRY 186]

Le jardin des caresses, by Franz Toussaint. Illustrations de Léon Carré. Paris: L'Édition d'Art H. Piazza, 1921. [FRY 65]

HENRI CARUCHET

Les litanies de la mer, by Jean Richepin. Aquarelles originales d'après Henri Caruchet. Paris: Imprimé pour Albert Bélinac, 1903. [FRY 66]

RAYMOND CHARMAISON

Les jardins précieux par Raymond Charmaison; préface de Henri de Régnier. Paris: Collection Pierre Corrard, chez Meynial, [1919]. [FRY 184]

ROGER CHASTEL AND PIERRE MOURGUE

. . . eh, bien, dansez maintenant. . . Paris: Aux Editions du Bon Ton, [1920?]. [FRY 19]

PAUL COLIN

Le tumulte noir par Paul Colin. Préface de Rip. Paris: Éditions d'Art, ("succès" éd.), [ca. 1930]. [FRY 20]

SONIA DELAUNAY

- Sonia Delaunay: ses peintures, ses objets, ses tissus simultanés, ses modes. Préface d'André Lhote. Poèmes de Cendrars, Delteil, Tzara, Soupault. Paris: Librairie des Arts Décoratifs, [1925]. [FRY 21]

ANDRÉ DERAÏN

Salomé. A tragedy in one act translated from the French of Oscar Wilde by Lord Alfred Douglas and illustrated by Aubrey Beardsley with a new introduction by Holbrook Jackson. London: Printed for the members of The Limited Editions Club, 1938. Salomé. Drame en un acte. Illustrations par André Derain. Paris: Imprimé à Paris pour les membres de The Limited Editions Club, 1938. [FRY 68]

ANDRÉ DOMIN

Litanies de la rose, by Rémy de Gourmont. Ouvrage illustré et décoré par André Domin. Paris: Editions René Kieffer, 1919. [FRY 70]

DUBOUT

Cyrano de Bergerac; comédie héroïque en cinq actes en vers, by Edmond Rostand. Représentée à Paris, sur le Théâtre de la Porte-Saint-Martin le 28 décembre 1897. Illustrée de compositions en couleurs de Dubout. Orléans: Maurice Rouam, 1947. [FRY 71]

EMILIEN DUFOUR

Mon frère Yves, by Pierre Loti [pseud.]. Illustrations d'Emilien Dufour. Paris: Calmann-Lévy, Éditeurs, 1936. [FRY 199]

RAOUL DUFY

Madrigaux, by Stéphane Mallarmé. Images de Raoul Dufy. Paris: Éditions de La Sirène, 1920. [FRY 72]

RAOUL DUFY ET AL.

Ouvert la nuit and Fermé la nuit, by Paul Morand. 2 volumes. Paris: édition nrf [Nouvelle Revue Française], 1924 and 1925. Ouvert la nuit is illustrated with six full-page watercolors by Raoul Dufy, André Favory, Roger de la Fresnaye, André Lhote, Luc-Albert Moreau, and André Dunoyer de Segonzac. They are reproduced in pochoir by J. Saudé. [FRY 73]

YAN-BERNARD DYL

Le miracle du fil. Seize sonnets de Henri de Régnier de l'Académie Française et seize planches en couleurs de Yan B. Dyl. Paris: Simon Kra, Éditeur, [ca. 1926]. [FRY 75]

Les oraisons amoureuses de Jeanne-Aurélien Grivolin lyonnaise, by Roger Pillet. Illustrées de quinze pointes sèches et d'ornements originaux de Yan B. Dyl. Paris: "La Connaissance," 1926. [FRY 76]

La petite ville. Composé et dessiné par Yan-Bernard Dyl. Paris: Simon Kra, Éditeur, [ca. 1925]. [FRY 74]

PIERRE FALKÉ

Le pot au noir. Scènes et Figures des Tropiques de Louis Chadourne. Bois gravés par Falké. Paris: Chez G. et A. Mornay, Libraires, 1922. [FRY 187]

PIERRE FAU

Popolôrepô, by Paul Poiret. Morceaux choisis par un imbécile et illustrés par un autre. Paris: Henri Jonquières, 1927. [FRY 79]

FERRAND

7e Bal de la Fourrure. Le 21 février 1928. Au Théâtre National de l'Opéra. Paris: Tolmer, 1928. [FRY 22]

TSUGOUHARU FOUJITA

Chansons des geishas. Traduites pour la première fois du japonais par [Émile] Steinilber-Oberlin et Hidetaké-Iwamura. Aquarelles et vignettes de Foujita. Paris: Aux Éditions G. Cres & Cie, 1926. [FRY 80]

CHARLES FOUQUERAY

La féerie cinghalaise, by Francis de Croisset. Illustrations originales de Charles Fouqueray. Paris: Les Éditions Monceau, 1947. [FRY 81]

Le révolté, by Maurice Larrouy. Aquarelles de Charles Fouqueray. Paris: René Kieffer, Relieur-Éditeur, 1929. [FRY 82]

ÉMILE GALLOIS

Provinces françaises. Costumes décoratifs. Préface de Maurice Genevoix. Paris: Éditions Art et Architecture; New York: French & European Publications, [ca. 1950?]. [FRY 202]

GEORGES GAUDION

Poèmes (1914–1924), by Paul Morand. Lampes a arc, feuilles de température suivies de vingt-cinq poèmes sans oiseaux. Illustré de seize aquarelles de Georges Gaudion. Toulouse: Éditions Richard, 1926. [FRY 83]

GEORGES VAN HOUTEN

Arlequinades: album de douze dessins de Georges van Houten. Paris: Sauvage, Éditeur, [ca. 1930?]. [FRY 122]

PAUL IRIBE

■ Les robes de Paul Poiret racontées par Paul Iribé. Paris: chez Paul Poiret Couturier, 1908. [FRY 24]

PER KROHG

Jérôme: 600 latitude nord, by Maurice Bedel. Illustré de nombreuses aquarelles par Per Krohg. Paris: Librairie Gallimard, 1929. [FRY 87]

CHARLES LABORDE

Fermina Márquez par Valéry Larbaud. Gravures sur cuivre de Chas Laborde. Paris: Éditions Émile-Paul Frères, 1925. [FRY 88]

La poupée, by Léo Larguier. Dessins de Chas Laborde. Paris: Collection "La Rose et le Laurier," G. Briffaut, Éditeur, 1925. [FRY 89]

ANDRÉ LANSKOY

■ Cortège, by Pierre Lecuire. Illustré de vingt-trois planches et d'une couverture en couleurs de Lanskoï. Paris: Pierre Lecuire, 1959. [FRY 90]

PIERRE LAPRADE

Le prélude, by Paul Géraudy. Avec vingt-cinq aquarelles de Pierre Laprade. Paris: "Éditions de la Lampe d'Argile," 1926. [FRY 91]

MARIE LAURENCIN

■ Deuxième album de Marie Laurencin. Paris: Quatre Chemins, [ca. 1930]. [FRY 92]

FERNAND LÉGER

La fin du monde filmée par l'Ange N.-D. [Notre-Dame], by Blaise Cendrars. Roman. Compositions en couleurs par Fernand Léger. Paris: Éditions de La Sirène, 1919. [FRY 93]

EDY LEGRAND

Les fleurs du mal, by Charles Baudelaire. Aquarelles d'Edy Legrand. Paris: Éditions du Trianon, 1930. [FRY 95]

■ Macao & Cosmage ou L'expérience du bonheur par Edy-Legrand. Paris: Aux Editions de la Nouvelle Revue Française, 1919. Graphic Arts Collection copy bound by Gérard Charrière. Gift of JoAnna Agle in memory of her husband, Charles Agle, Class of 1929. [FRY 94]

Pontoise, ou La folle journée, by Paul Fort. Orné d'illustrations en couleurs de E. Legrand. Paris: Éditions René Kieffer, 1920. [FRY 96]

Voyages & glorieuses découvertes des grands navigateurs & explorateurs français. Illustré par Edy Legrand. Paris: Tolmer, [1921]. [FRY 48]

GEORGES LEPAPE

■ Les choses de Paul Poiret; vues par Georges Lepape. Paris: Paul Poiret, 1911. [FRY 32]

Décor et costumes pour L'oiseau bleu de Maurice Maeterlinck. Avec une préface de Gérard d'Houville [pseud.]. Paris: Société d'Édition "Le Livre," 1927. [FRY 31]

L'oiseau bleu, by Maurice Maeterlinck. Féerie. Avec quatorze aquarelles originales de Georges Lepape. Paris: "Le Livre," 1925. [FRY 30]

ANDRÉ LHOTE

Escapes, by André Lhote and Jean Cocteau. Paris: Editions de La Sirène, 1920. Illustrated with 10 color plates [9 full-page, 1 double spread], and 19 drawings by André Lhote. [FRY 97]

SIMON LISSIM

Simon Lissim, by Raymond Cogniat, Georges Lechevallier-Chevignard, and Louis Réau. Préface de M. Paul Léon. Paris: Aux Éditions du Cygne, 1933. [FRY 35]

MARIETTE LYDIS

Les litanies de la vierge, by Armand Godoy. 48 lithographies enluminées de Mariette Lydis. Paris: A. Blazot et Fil, 1934. [FRY 98]

ROBERT MAHIAS

La promenade de Versailles dédiée au Roi par Madeleine de Scuderi & embellie d'estampes de Robert Mahias. Paris: à l'Enseigne du Masque d'Or (chez Devambez), 1920. [FRY 201]

CHARLES MARTIN

Contes vénitiens, by Henri de Régnier de l'Académie Française. Avec une préface inédite de l'auteur et douze aquarelles et des vignettes de Charles Martin. Paris: Société d'Édition "Le Livre," 1927. [FRY 102]

Histoire de Manon Lescaut et du Chevalier des Grieux, by L'Abbé Prévost. Illustrations de Charles Martin. Paris: La Méridienne, 1934. [FRY 101]

Mon cheval, mes amis et mon amie, by Marcel Astruc. Dessins de Ch. Martin. Paris: La Renaissance du Livre, 1921. [FRY 100]

La parisienne. Paris: chez Marcelle Demay, 1912. [FRY 36]

Sports & divertissements. Musique d'Erik Satie. Dessins de Charles Martin. Paris: Publications Lucien Vogel, 1914. [FRY 103]

ANDRÉ-EDOUARD MARTY

L'art d'aimer d'Ovide. Traduction nouvelle de Pierre Lièvre avec des illustrations de A.-E. Marty. Paris: Émile Chamontin, Éditeur, 1935. [FRY 205]

MATHURIN MÉHEUT

"Regarde . . ." par Colette et Méheut. Paris: J.-G. Deschamps, Librairie, 1929. [FRY 104]

JOAN MIRÓ

"Il était une petite pie," by Lise Hirtz. 7 chansons et 3 chansons pour Hyacinthe avec 8 dessins en couleur par Joan Miró. Paris: Édition Jeanne Bucher, 1928. [FRY 107]

PAUL MORAND

Siam. Orné de miniatures siamoises du XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle se trouve aux éditions d'art. Paris: Aux Aldes, [ca. 1928]. [FRY 106]

GUSTAV-ADOLF MOSSA

Les sept femmes de la Barbe-Bleue et autres contes merveilleux, by Anatole

France. Illustrations en couleurs de G.-A. Mossa. Paris: Librairie des Amateurs (Ferroud), 1921. [FRY 108]

LÉON MOUSSINAC

Tendances nouvelles du théâtre. Choix de décors, costumes, détails de mise en scène utilisés dans les représentations les plus originales de ces quinze dernières années. Précédé de remarques sur les récentes recherches de l'art du théâtre. Paris: Éditions Albert Lévy, 1931. [FRY 38]

JEAN OBERLÉ

Mitsou ou Comment l'esprit vient aux filles, by Colette. Dessins coloriés de Jean Oberlé. Paris: Les Beaux Romans, Henri Jonquières et Cie, Éditeurs, 1926. [FRY 109]

JULES PASCIN

3 petites filles dans la rue. Texte par André Warnod. Dessins en couleurs de Pascin. Paris: Éditions de la Fanfare de Montparnasse, 1925. [FRY 110]

HERMANN PAUL

Les ames du Purgatoire, by Prosper Mérimée. Quinze aquarelles de Hermann Paul. Paris: René Kieffer, Éditeur, 1929. [FRY 111]

PABLO PICASSO

Picasso: Vingt pochoirs. Présentés par Franco Russoli. Milan: "Silvana" Editoriale d'Arte; Paris: Berggruen & Cie, 1955. [FRY 197]

PABLO PICASSO ET AL.

L'art cubiste, by Guillaume Janneau. Théories et réalisations. Étude critique. Paris: Éditions d'Art Charles Moreau, 1929. [FRY 85]

Douze contemporains, by Jacques Lassaigne. Paris: Éditions d'Art du Lion, 1959. [FRY 198]

ROBERT POLACK

Candide ou L'optimisme; Zadig; Jeannot et Colin, by Voltaire. Aquarelles de Robert Polack. Paris: Éditions Nilsson, [ca. 1927]. [FRY 207]

MAN RAY

Revolving doors 1916–1917, by Man Ray. 10 planches. Paris: Éditions Surréalistes, 1926. [FRY 99]

JACK ROBERTS

Histoire aventureuse de Ludovic, le joli petit canard vert. Paris: Tolmer, 1924. [FRY 112]

GEORGES ROUAULT

Les clowns par Henry Church avec trois dessins de Georges Rouault. Paris: Éditions des Deux Amis, 1922. [FRY 113]

ENRICO SACCHETTI

Robes et femmes par Enrico Sacchetti. Paris: Dorbon-Ainé, 1913. [FRY 41]

JEAN SAUDÉ

■ Traité d'enluminure d'art au pochoir par Jean Saudé. Précédé de notes par MM. Antoine Bourdelle[,] Lucien Descaves, de l'Académie Goncourt et SEM. Aquarelles de Beuzée-Reynaud, Benedictus, Bourdelle, Brunetta, L. Chapuis, Dorival, Abel Faivre, Halouze, Lepape, Madelaine, Morisset, Rodin, Sem et Vignal. Reproductions d'après Jean Fouquet, A. Besnard, image de Georgin. Paris: Aux Éditions de l'Ibis, 1925. [FRY 1]

MARCEL SAUVAGE

■ Voyages et aventures de Joséphine Baker. Illustré de photographies, de hors-texte en couleurs, et de nombreux dessins. Paris: Éditions Marcel Seheur, 1931. [FRY 42]

SYLVAIN SAUVAGE

Florilège de la poésie amoureuse du XII<sup>e</sup> au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle, by André Berry. Il Age Classique. Illustrations de Sylvain Sauvage. Paris: Le Vasseur & Cie, Éditeurs, 1948. [FRY 185]

FRANÇOIS-LOUIS SCHMIED

Lueurs et pénombre. Florilège, by José Imbert. Avec un message du Dr. J.-C. Mardrus et une Hors-Texte en enluminure du maître peintre et graveur F.-L. Schmied. Paris: "Les Amis de José Imbert," 1932. [FRY 114]

CARLOZ SCHWABE

Hespérus, by Catulle Mendès. Illustrations en couleurs de Carloz Schwabe. Paris: Société de Propagation des Livres d'Art, 1934. [FRY 115]

SEM (PSEUD.)

■ Le vrai et le faux chic. Paris: "Succès," 1914. [FRY 43]

GINO SEVERINI

■ Fleurs et masques. Londres: Frederick Etchells & Hugh Macdonald, 1930. [FRY 116]

LUCIEN SIMON

Le poison, by Edmond Haraucourt. Illustrations en couleurs de Lucien Simon. Paris: Éditions René Kieffer, 1920. [FRY 117]

SERGE DE SOLOMKO

Les trois rois, by Émile Gebhart. Conte d'Épiphanie. Nombreuses illustrations en couleurs de Serge de Solomko. Paris: Librairie des Amateurs, A. Ferroud.—F. Ferroud, Successeur, 1919. [FRY 118]

ARTHUR SZYK

Le puits de Jacob, by Pierre Benoit. Miniatures de Arthur Szyk. Préface de A. de Monzie. Paris: Albin Michel, Éditeur, [1927]. [FRY 119]

Témoignages pour l'art abstrait 1952. Introduction de Léon Degand. Propos recueillis par Julien Alvard et R. V. Gindertael. Photographies-Portraits par Serge Vandercam. Paris: Éditions "Art d'Aujourd'hui," 1952. [FRY 120]

AUG. H. THOMAS

Formes et couleurs, by Aug. H. Thomas. Vingt planches en couleurs contenant soixante-sept motifs décoratifs. Paris: Librairie Centrale des Beaux-Arts, Albert Lévy, Éditeur, [ca. 1930]. [FRY 204]

TOUCHET

Les aventures du Roi Pausole, by Pierre Louÿs. Cinq illustrations originales en couleurs de Touchet. Paris: Rombaldi, Éditeur, 1937. [FRY 193]

Les rencontres de M. de Bréot, by Henri de Régnier de l'Académie Française. Illustrations en couleurs de Touchet. Paris: Collection Poivre et Sel, Éditions Kra, 1929. [FRY 206]

KEES VAN DONGEN

Deauville. Aquarelles gravées sur cuivre par Maccard et dessins en couleurs de Van Dongen. Texte de Paul Poiret. Paris: Éditions M.-P. Trémois, 1931. [FRY 121]

PAUL VERA

Les amours de Psyché et de Cupidon, by Jean de La Fontaine. Lithographies rehaussées d'aquarelle et bois gravés par Paul Vera. Paris: À la Cité des Livres, 1925. [FRY 123]

MARCEL VERTÈS

Dancing. Wien: Verlag Rudolf Brettschneider, 1922. [FRY 44]

GERDA WEGENER

Sur talons rouges, by Eric Allantini. Contes. Aquarelles de Gerda Wegener. Paris: G. Briffaut, éditeur, [ca. 1920?]. [FRY 124]

Art & Fashion Journals

Art. Goût. Beauté. Feuillet de l'élégance féminine. Paris. No. 24-2e Année. Août 1922. Paris: H. Rouit, 1922. Illustrations drawn by Colette, M. M. Baratin, J. Dory, Ledoux, Matiotin, Y. Meston, Myrio, and P. Scavone. [FRY 6]

■ Feuillets d'art. Six issues of this folio review devoted to the arts, comprising the entire first series. Paris: Feuillets d'Art, May 1919–July 1920. [FRY 23]

■ La gazette du bon ton. Arts, Modes & Frivolités. Bound in four volumes: Paris: Octobre 1912–Avril 1913; Mai 1913–Nov. 1913; Dec. 1913–Avril 1914; May 1914–1915. Paris: Émile Lévy Éditeur, Lucien Vogel, Directeur, 1912–1915. Lucien Vogel, director of the publication, used many of the best artist/designers of the day for illustrations, among them Charles Martin, Pierre Brissaud, Georges Lepape, Umberto Brunelleschi, André-Edouard Marty, George Barbier, Léon Bakst, Enrico Sacchetti, and Erté. [FRY 26]

La guirlande. Album mensuel d'Art et de Littérature. Sous la direction littéraire de Monsieur Jean Hermanovits. Sous la direction artistique de Monsieur Brunelleschi. First eleven issues, all published, of this monthly review devoted to art and literature. Paris: La Guirlande, 1919–1920. Illustrated with numerous color vignettes and 59 hors-texte plates reproduced via pochoir by Jean Sauté. Among the contributions are Brunelleschi's illustrations for Abel Hermant's Phili [serialized in issues 1–11], his Oriental subjects [for Hermanovits's translations from the Arabic], and a number of his hors-texte plates ["Un soir à Venise," "L'arlequin curieux," "Le baiser sur l'échelle," "Concert," etc.]; a number of plates by George Barbier, including "Le perroquet jaloux" and "Dogeresse," and his illustrations for René Boylesve's "Le carrosse aux deux lézards verts" [serialized in issues 5–8, 10–11]; two Oriental subjects by Emmanuel Blanche; Domergue's "Études de femme" [No. 7–8]; "Rah-el-Rah," by Cito [No. 8]; and interiors by Bonnotte and Stab. Other illustrators are Gerda Wegener, Abel Faivre, Maurice Taquoy, Benito, Zinoviev, Robert Polack, Cadogan, and Lucienne Martin. [FRY 27]

Le goût du jour. Complete set of 13 issues of this French fashion journal, published from June 20–December 20, 1920. Paris: Chez François Bernouard, 1920. Contributing artists are J. E. Laboureur, Llano Florez, Hélène Perdriat, Robert Bonfils, Charles Guérin, Marcelle Pichon, Charles Nistch, A.-E. Marty, Robert Linzeler, Pierre Laprade, Gabriele Daragnès, Pierre Brissaud, Paul Follot, and Michel Dufet. [FRY 29]

■ L'homme élégant. Revue Semestrielle Illustré de la Mode. 5me Année—No. 2. Octobre 1921. Paris: Geo Harrison, 1921. [FRY 34]

Les idées nouvelles de la mode et des arts. Three separate issues of this illustrated monthly fashion magazine published in Paris: No. 6 and 8, 1927; No. 4, 1928. [FRY 33]

■ Journal des dames et des modes. Paris: Aux Bureaux du Journal des Dames, 1912–1914. Among the fashion artists represented are George Barbier, Charles Martin, Etienne Drian, Gosé, Bernard Boutet de Monvel, and Brunelleschi. Besides the many depictions of fashionable women wearing the latest [evening and sports wear, nightgowns, etc.], there are also arrangements of umbrellas [pl. 9], hats [pls. 12 and 19, both by Martin], jewelry by Vever [pl. 37], modèles by Geo. Rouard “À la Paix” [pl. 40], and fans by Paquin after Barbier and Paul Iribé. The Journal des dames et des modes played the role of “an acute and intellectually shrewd observer at the height of the Folle Époque.” Among the well-known contributors are Anatole France, Comtesse de Noailles, Jean Cocteau, René Boylesve, Robert Boutet de Monvel, Francis de Miomandre, André Picard, and Gabriele d’Annunzio. [FRY 25]

La mode féminine, de 1900 à 1920. No place [Paris?], [ca. 1920]. [FRY 192]

Modes et manières d’aujourd’hui. 1912–1922. First through tenth year. Complete set of the series devoted to the “fashions and styles of today,” featuring some of the most accomplished “fashion” artists of the period, including Georges Lepape, Charles Martin, George Barbier, André Marty, Robert Bonfils, and Fernand Siméon. [FRY 37]

Modes et manières d’aujourd’hui. 1912. Georges Lepape peignit ces 12 gouaches, Pierre Corrard fit la préface et les légendes. Paris: no publisher (Collection Pierre Corrard), 1912. [FRY 37a]

■ Modes et manières d’aujourd’hui. 1913. (2<sup>e</sup> année). Martin peignit ces 12 gouaches, la préface est de Nozière. Paris: Collection Pierre Corrard, 1913. [FRY 37b]

■ Modes et manières d’aujourd’hui. 1914. (3<sup>e</sup> année). Henri de Régnier vit ces douze aquarelles de George Barbier et se divertit à les chanter. Paris: Collection Pierre Corrard, 1914. [FRY 37c]

Modes et manières d’aujourd’hui. 1914–1919. Années de guerre. Douze gouaches de Georges Lepape. Douze poèmes de Henry-Jacques. Paris: Collection Pierre Corrard, 1921. [FRY 37d]

■ Modes et manières d’aujourd’hui. 1919. Huitième année. Douze aquarelles de André Marty. Douze pensées de Tristan Bernard. Paris: Collection Pierre Corrard, 1921. [FRY 37e]

Modes et manières d’aujourd’hui. 1920. Neuvième année. Douze aquarelles de Robert Bonfils agrémentées de prose de Gérard d’Houville [pseud.]. Paris: Collection Pierre Corrard, 1922. [FRY 37f]

Modes et manières d’aujourd’hui. 1922. Dixième année. Bois originaux de F. Siméon. Texte par Paul Valéry. Paris: Collection Pierre Corrard, 1923. [FRY 37g]

Revillon Frères. Fashion folio. 1927–1928. Paris, London, and New York: Revillon Frères, 1927–28. [FRY 39]

Revillon Frères. Fashion folio. 1929–1930. Paris, London, and New York: Revillon Frères, 1929–30. [FRY 40]

Ornament

EDOUARD BENEDICTUS

■ Nouvelles variations. Soixante-quinze motifs décoratifs en vingt planches par Benedictus. Paris: Aux Éditions Albert Lévy, Librairie Centrale des Beaux-Arts, [ca. 1926]. [FRY 126]

Relais 1930. Quinze planches donnant quarante-deux motifs décoratifs. Enluminure d'art de J. Saudé. Préliminaires de Y. Rambosson. Paris: Éditions Vincent Fréal et Cie (Ancienne Maison Auguste Vincent), 1930. [FRY 127]

Variations. Quatre-vingt-six motifs décoratifs en vingt planches. Pochoirs de J. Saudé. Paris: Librairie Centrale des Beaux-Arts, [ca. 1923]. [FRY 125]

EDOUARD BENEDICTUS ET AL.

Le document du décorateur. Troisième Série. Fleurs Stylisées. Paris: Armand Guérinet, “Librairie d'Art Décoratif,” [ca. 1903]. [FRY 151]

GEORG BRESSER

Ideen. Originalentwürfe erster Künstler für moderne Blätter, Blumen usw. redigiert und zusammengestellt von Georg Bresser. Berlin-Charlottenburg: Werkbild-Verlag, 1931. [FRY 129]

JEAN BURKHALTER

Collection “décors et couleurs” Album No. 2. Soixante-dix motifs décoratifs en dix-huit planches. Paris: Aux Éditions Albert Lévy, [ca. 1930]. [FRY 130]

HENRI CLOUZOT

Le décor moderne dans la tenture et le tissu. Paris: Ch. Massin & Cie, [ca. 1928]. [FRY 134]

Papiers peints et tentures modernes (toiles et cretonnes imprimées). Paris: Ch. Massin & Cie, [ca. 1926]. [FRY 133]

G. DARCY

Or et couleurs; recueil de 60 dessins composés par G. Darcy dans le goût nouveau à l'usage des fabricants d'étoffes, décorateurs, brodeurs et dessinateurs d'ornements. Paris: La Librairie des Arts Décoratifs, [ca. 1920]. [FRY 146]

SONIA DELAUNAY

Compositions, couleurs, idées. Sonia Delaunay. Paris: Editions d'Art, Charles Moreau, [1930]. [FRY 135]

CLAUDIUS DENIS

Études & idées de décoration moderne. Fleurs stylisées, ornementation figures, etc. Paris: Armand Guérinet, Editeur, Librairie d'Art Décoratif, [ca. 1902]. [FRY 136]

Dessins. 20 planches en couleurs. Paris: Librairie des Arts Décoratifs, A. Calavas, Éditeur, [ca. 1930]. [FRY 137]

ANDRÉ DURENCEAU

Inspirations. Twenty-four plates, with 128 compositions by André Durenceau. Woodstock, New York: H. C. Perleberg, 1928. [FRY 138]

ANDRÉ GARCELON

Inspirations. 80 Motifs en Couleurs. Paris: Librairie Générale de l'Architecture et des Arts Décoratifs, Ch. Massin & Cie, Éditeurs; Plauen: Christian Stoll, [ca. 1927]. [FRY 139]

SERGE GLADKY

Compositions ornementales. 26 planches en couleurs. Texte par Maurice Raynal. Paris: Éditions "Le Prisme," 1926. [FRY 140]

Fleurs. Texte et vingt-six planches en couleurs par Serge Gladky. Paris: Éditions "Synth," 1929. [FRY 141]

Motifs décoratifs. Six planches en couleurs. Préface de Maurice Raynal. Paris: Éditions des Quatre Chemins, [ca. 1926?]. [FRY 143]

Nouvelles compositions décoratives. 1ere série. 48 planches par Serge Gladky. Introduction de Georges Rémon. Paris: Éditions d'Art Charles Moreau, [1931]. [FRY 144]

Nouvelles compositions décoratives. 2me série. 48 planches par Serge Gladky. Paris: Éditions d'Art Charles Moreau, [1931]. [FRY 145]

Point de vue. Dix-sept compositions en couleurs. Deuxième série. Paris: Éditions des Quatre Chemins, [1937]. [FRY 152]

EUGÈNE GRASSET

■ La plante et ses applications ornementales. Sous la direction de M. Eugène Grasset. Paris: Librairie Centrale des Beaux-Arts. E. Lévy, Éditeur, 1896. [FRY 147]

La plante et ses applications ornementales. Sous la direction de M. Eugène Grasset (Deuxième série). Paris: Librairie Centrale des Beaux-Arts, E. Lévy, Éditeur, [ca. 1899]. [FRY 148]

HENRY GUÉDY

La décoration picturale au xxe siècle. Publiée sous la direction de Henry Guédy, architecte (s. A. F.). Avec le Concours de MM. Abel Boyé–Auburtin–Barbaud et Bauhain–Bastien–Lepage–A. Calbet–Coudyser–H. d’Espouy–L. Dufour–Flandrin–Jobbé Duval–Jusseaume–Klein–Niernans etc., etc. 2 volumes. Paris: Librairies-Imprimeries Réunies, Ancienne Maison Morel, [ca. 1930]. [FRY 149]

PAUL LORAIN

La flore décorative. Recueil de plantes dessinées d’après nature accompagnées d’exemples d’interprétation et d’application à l’ornement publié sous la direction de Paul Lorain architecte de l’Union Centrale des Arts Décoratifs. Paris: Librairie Générale de l’Architecture et des Arts Décoratifs, Charles Schmid, Éditeur, [ca. 1900?]. [FRY 189]

H. RASKIN

Fantaisies oceanographiques. En 25 planches en couleurs proposant 58 fantaisies inédites. Paris: F. Dumas, Éditeur, 1926. [FRY 153]

E. A. SÉGUY

Les fleurs et leurs applications décoratives. 30 planches. Paris: Librairie des Arts Decoratifs, A. Calavas Editeur, [1901]. [FRY 156]

Les fleurs et leurs applications décoratives. 30 planches. 2me volume. Paris: Librairie des Arts Decoratifs, A. Calavas Editeur, [1902]. [FRY 157]

Floréal. Dessins & coloris nouveaux par E. A. Séguy. Paris: A. Calavas, Éditeur, [ca. 1914]. [FRY 154]

Insectes. Vingt planches en phototypie coloriées au patron donnant quatre-vingt insectes et seize compositions décoratives. Paris: Éditions Duchartre et Van Buggenhoudt, [ca. 1925]. [FRY 155]

Les laques du Coromandel. 50 planches publiées sous la direction et avec une introduction de E.-A. Séguy. Nouvelle Édition. Paris: Éditions Albert Lévy, Librairie Centrale des Beaux-Arts, [ca. 1910?]. [FRY 158]

Papillons, by E. A. Séguy. Vingt planches en phototypie coloriées au patron donnant 81 papillons et 16 compositions décoratives. Paris: Tolmer Editeur, [ca. 1925]. [FRY 159]

Primavera. Dessins & coloris nouveaux par EA Séguy. Plauen: Christian Stoll, [ca. 1913]. [FRY 160]

Prismes. 40 Planches de Dessins et Coloris Nouveaux. Paris: Éditions d’Art Charles Moreau, [ca. 1925]. [FRY 161]

GEORGES VALMIER

Collection decors et couleurs. Album No. 1 par Georges Valmier. Pochoirs de J. Saudé. Paris: Aux Editions Albert Levy, [ca. 1930]. [FRY 164]

AD. ET M. P. VERNEUIL

Kaleidoscope. Ornaments abstraits. Quatre-vingt-sept motifs en vingt planches composés par Ad. et M.-P. Verneuil; pochoirs de J. Saude. Paris: Éditions Albert Levy, [ca. 1926]. [FRY 166]

M. P. VERNEUIL

Étude de la plante. Son application aux industries d'art. Pochoir. Papier peint. Étoffes. Céramique. Marqueterie. Tapis. Ferronnerie. Reliure. Dentelles. Broderie. Vitrail. Mosaïque. Bijouterie. Bronze. Orfèvrerie. Paris: Librairie Centrale des Beaux-Arts, [ca. 1900]. [FRY 165]

L'ornementation par le pochoir. Paris: Schmid, Éditeur; Laurens, Éditeur, [ca. 1896]. [FRY 167]

Architecture & Interior Design

JEAN BADOVICI

Intérieurs français présentés par Jean Badovici, architecte. Documents d'Architecture. Art Français Contemporain. Paris: Éditions Albert Morancé, 1925. [FRY 168]

Motifs décoratifs, by Serge Gladky. Six planches en couleurs. Préface de Maurice Raynal. Paris: Éditions des Quatre Chemins, [ca. 1926?]. [FRY 143]

V. BOBERMAN

Tapis édité par Dim. Vingt quatre compositions en couleurs. Avec une préface par Maurice Raynal. Paris: Éditions des Quatre Chemins, 1929. [FRY 128]

VICTOR CHAMPIER, ÉDITEUR

Documents d'atelier. Art décoratif moderne. Album contenant 60 planches en couleurs fac-simile d'aquarelles. 200 modèles nouveaux pour les industries d'art. Architecture, Meubles, Céramique, Orfèvrerie, Bijouterie, Tissus, etc. Composés par MM. Bonnier, Émil Causé, Edme Couty, J. Damp, Ch. Génuys, R. Lalique, Marius Michele, Mucha, H. Nocq, V. Prouvé, E. Robert, Rudnicki, A. Sandier, Selmersheim, Tourette, etc., etc. Préface par Gustave Larroumet, Membre d l'Institut. [Première Série]. Paris: Librairie de la Revue des Arts Décoratifs, 1898. [FRY 131]

Documents d'atelier. Art décoratif moderne. Album contenant 60 planches en couleurs fac-simile d'aquarelles. Modèles nouveaux pour les industries d'art. Architecture, Meubles, Céramique, Orfèvrerie, Bijouterie, Tissus, etc. Composés par Bastard, L. Bigaux, L. Chalon, G. Combaz, Edme Couty, J. Damp, Georges-Jean, A. Giraldon, Hector Guimard, A. Ledru, C. Lefebvre, Aug. Lepère, Lucien Magne, L. Majorelle, A. Mucha, Ed. Niermans, Ch. Plumet, V. Prouvé, E. Robert, P.-J. Ruban, L. Rudnicki, A. Sandier, Pierre Selmersheim, Ed. Tapissier, R. Wiener, Ph. Wolfers, etc. etc. Deuxième Série. Paris: Librairie Rouam et Cie, 1899. [FRY 132]

MAXINE GIZALETTI

Villas de France. Paris: Éditions Alexis Sinjon, [ca. 1932]. [FRY 170]

HENRY DELACROIX

Boutiques. Paris: Éditions S. de Bonadona, [ca. 1935]. [FRY 171]

Boutiques 2. Présenté par Henry Delacroix & A. Lézine, architectes. Paris: S. de Bonadona, [ca. 1935]. [FRY 172]

Décoration moderne dans l'intérieur. Paris: Éditions S. de Bonadona, [1935]. [FRY 173]

MAURICE DUFRÈNE

■ Un intérieur moderne par Maurice Dufrène. Livraison 123. Préface de Gustave Soulier. 18 planches. Paris: Librairie des Arts Decoratifs, [ca. 1900]. [FRY 174]

MAURICE DUFRÈNE ET AL.

Une ambassade française organisée par la Société des Artistes Décorateurs. Exposition Internationale des Arts Decoratifs et Industriels Modernes, Paris, 1925. Paris: Editions d'Art Charles Moreau, 1925. [FRY 183]

A. GELBERT ET AL.

L'habitation pratique. Group of 11 individual fascicles of this architectural review, dating from January to November 1907 (2e Série, 4e Année). [FRY 182]

SERGE GLADKY

La voie céleste. Tapis astraux. Quinze compositions en couleurs. Préface par Georges Rémon. Paris: Éditions des Quatre Chemins, 1929. [FRY 142]

RENÉ HERBST

Boutiques et magasins présenté par René-Herbst. Paris: Éditions d'Art Charles Moreau, [ca. 1925]. [FRY 178]

A. MANERA

Étalages 1939. xx photographies et xx projets inédits d'étalages xx recueillis et présentés par A. Manera. Paris: Éditions "Art & Architecture," 1939. [FRY 175]

J. MARRAST

MCMXXV Jardins. Paris: Éditions d'Art Charles Moreau, 1926. [FRY 176]

PABLO PICASSO ET AL.

Tapis modernes présentés par Mr. M. Matet. Paris: Mr. H. Ernst, Éditeur, [ca. 1930]. [FRY 162]

GEORGES RÉMON

Intérieurs modernes par Georges Rémon Architecte-Décorateur. Paris: Librairie de l'Art Ancien et Moderne (Ancienne Maison J. Rouam & Cie), [ca. 1900]. [FRY 177]

RUHLMANN

“Harmonies.” Intérieurs de Ruhlmann présentés par Jean Badovici, architecte. Paris: Éditions Albert Morancé, 1924. [FRY 179]

L.-P. SÉZILLE

Devantures de boutiques. 48 planches publiées sous la direction et avec une introduction de L.-P. Sézille. Paris: Éditions Albert Lévy, 1927. [FRY 180]

SÜE ET MARE

Intérieurs de Süe et Mare présentés par Jean Badovici, architecte. Paris: Éditions Albert Morancé, 1924. [FRY 181]